Most of these devices belong to the bonus budget segment. The Oppo K3 is another such offering for the company's premium mid-range processor and motorized popup selfie camera. It also brings with it some new wallpapers. Oppo K3 wallpapers are available for download below. Oppo K3 Oppo K3 uses a selfie camera motorized pop-up module to avoid droplets. But among the phones with no-limit and all screens, this one is probably the biggest chin. This is certainly a noticeable size, though not as bad as some other phones pruning. It seems a little more uncomfortable not to have a bezel at the top and some at the bottom. The design of the back phone looks anything but generic. The double camera set on the back is vertically aligned in the middle and the modules are separate, instead of being one long vertical black bar. The strip exists, though in the form of text and branding, housing a vertically aligned Oppo logo. The cameras are a little protruded which is not quite a different trend today. Oppo K3 Oppo K3 looks like Oppo Reno and actually shares a lot of common hardware from the inside. The front has a big screen, a small chin at the bottom, and that's all that is. No one, but Apple has released the chin yet even though many, including Oppo itself, are able to make it much smaller than it is here. Another area where Oppo follows the trend is the glass construction of the device. The back is a multicolored, protected metal rim. There is also a USB 2.0 Type C charging port, as well as a headphone jack. The special microphone also allows built-in active noise suppression. The fingerprint reader is embedded under the screen. The specs display at the front is an impressive, immersive, 6.5-inch AMOLED capacitive touchscreen. It has a resolution of 1080 pixels to 2340 pixels, which means that it packs ~ 396 pixels per inch. The resolution of oppo K3 wallpapers is the same as the resolution of this screen. Despite all the screen design, Oppo manages only ~84.7% of the screen-body ratio, which is still impressive, but some OEMs manage more of the limit. The device has an aspect ratio of 19.5:9. Under the screen, it packs a Qualcomm Snapdragon 710, which has an octa-core processor. The PROCESSOR on the chip is connected to the Adreno 616 GPU. There are two options of 6GB and 8GB of RAM in front of the memory. The 6GB RAM option is available with 64GB internal storage options while the 8GB option offers only a 128GB internal storage option. Storage cannot be expanded because the microSD slot does not exist. The battery is a non-removable 3765mAh Li-Po one and supports Oppo's patented fast charging technology VOOC Flash charging, at 20W. The back of the camera is 16 f/1.7 aperture and PDAF support. It also supports HDR and panoramic shots. The second camera is just a 2MP, f2.4 depth sensor. The front camera is a 16MP sensor with an f/2.0 aperture. The rear camera can record video at 2160p @ 30fps or 1080p 30fps while the front camera can shoot up to 1080p videos at 30 fps. The Software Device goes out of the Android 9.0 box with ColorOS 6 built on top. Download Oppo K3 Wallpapers We have 5 Oppo K3 wallpapers that can be viewed below.
